Advice from Paris state that a difference of opinion prevailed in the Cabinet with respect to the proper period for the proclamation of the Empire : some are for its taking place without further delay; others consider that certain formalities should previously be gone through, in certain formatizes anomal previously be gone through, in order to give an appearance of legality; whilst a third party would prefer its being postponed till after the President's marriage, respecting which the name of a young lady of high rank, whose family has been long re-

Terrible Shipwreck. TOTAL LOSS OF THE AMERICAN SHIP MOBILE AND

SEVENTY TWO LIVES. We regret to have to record the total loss of the ship Mobile, Captain Tarbox, of Bath, Me, and for New Orhands and east passengers, all of whom, with the exception of nine, perioled. The Mobile sailed from the Mersey, Tuesday morning, with a fair wind, and made good progress throughout the day. At midnight the captain went beow, leaving the second mate in charge, with orders to two o'clock, or sooner, if the weather became threatening. At midnight the wind was blowing a fresh breeze from

On the ceptain coming on deak at two o'clock he found the ship on a lee shore, from which it was impossible to extricate her the second mate hav-ing, it is said, mistaken his orders, and kept the abip on a west north-west course. At half-past two the struck heavily on Arklow Bank, and shortly afterwards commenced to break up. Efforts were made to launch the boats, but, in consequence of the high sca, they were fruitless. A few hours after the vessel struck the weather moderated, and at 11 o'clock, vessel struck, the weather moderated, and at 11 o'clock, on thur dey morning, two rehooners have in sight, and immediately bors down to the wrock. One of them, bound to Giargow, took off four sailors and the only surviving passenger, and the other took the remaining four sailors and landed them at Wextord, whence they have been forwarded to Liverpool. As an instance of the little chame it was thought there was of any one on board being saved, an incident occurred which is worth relating in the cabin was a haly passenger, who had upwards of 550 in gold in her possession, which she effected to one of the sailors but he rejected the proffered gift, as he would have no chames to use it. In a few minutes a sense wept the lady overboard. The sailor, however, was santing the saved.

The Arctic brings us the following note from Captain Williams of the ship American Congress (Grinnett & Minturn's line,) dated

Arrivals of Australian Gold.

[From the Glasgow Mail, Oct. 5.]

The last few days have witnessed the most extraordinary arrivals of gold from Australia. The close of last week brought four or five-thips into the Fhames, with cargoes of gold dust of various amounts up to £100,000. But all there versels were outstripped by the Medway, which arrived on Saturday, with a cargo of gold dust valued at upwards of £270,000. This does not appear to include the quantity of the preclous metal in the possession of the passengers on board. The whole store of Australian produce brought into port by this ship is estimated at half a militon stering. There seems no reason to doubt the accuracy of the reports received lately from the Australian diggings, which are more like the fabulous wonders of romanne than sober realities. The isoport of gold may be expected now almost weekly to increase, for the accounts from the celony represent best the population employed at the diggings to be increasing incomparative productiveness. It is important to observe the efficiency with the siled last week for Port Philip with £30,000 m coin. The Meibourne mail steamer cartied with her about £150,000 m coin. The Meibourne mail steamer cartied with her about £150,000 in coin. The Meibourne mail steamer cartied with her about £150,000 in sovereigns. To these sums must be added the amounts taken out by passengars, which cannot be smail. The practice of carrying large sums of money with them in gold coin is more prevalent among emigrants than might be supposed. We observe in the report of a fatal shipwreak in to day's paper that one of the passengars had £500 in gold which she offered in vain to any one of the railors who had thought it possible to saveit. The increased production of gold will have the effect of timulating its diffusion. Thus, in considering the effect which these humanness supplies of gold are likely to have on the value of money, we have to take into account not only the proportion which the annual production bears to the whole am is weak and life and property but foolig defended. Two things seem absolutely necessary. The immediate des-patch of a police or military force adequate to preserve order; and the withdrawal of convicts from a causiry of such strong temptatic neto, and so many facilities for, the commission of cinner.

The Eruption of Ætna.

We have been favored with the perusal of a private letter as late as the 16th Sept announcing the lava to have taken another direction, and is fast approaching Milo, the inhabitants of which, to save the wood, are outting down their che-mut trees, and, of course, emptying their houses. A ceasting yeased, the Monghello, when tying at anchor near Catania has been covered with sal ammoniae the issue from the mountain. A specimen has been sent to this island and has been pronounced of the very best quality. The mountain sent it forth in vast clouds. We fird the following graphic account of the lava in a letter dated Catania. August 30.—
Verterday after breakfast, we reached Zuffarana; from the last house in the villege we saw the lava at guminot distance, and at that distance the heat was very great. The manner in which the extraordinary and frightful forcent advanced is not to be described—it must be seen. It moves alowly and uninterruptedity; the first waves if I may so express myself rise and fall at the least obstacle they encounter; then send forth streamlets here and there, recede, extend themselves, and again advance. Now it is heard as a continued sound of glass breaking in the fire—nothing more—and now immerce damage ancesed. Every now and then it is arrested, denoting the presence of greater op-facles, or of water.

By day all this grand mass presents an appearance between red and yellow—cometimes dull, sometimes orighter. It can ill describe the spectacle by night—that dull stream of fire—those clouds of a-hes and sulphurcous vapors—are beyond description and submety horriols.

The streams of lava are much higher than the surrounding land for as the former bads have become solid the new have flows over them.

In truth, nothing can be more pleturesque, could we divest ourselves of the feeling of misery and grief which rounding land for as the former bods have become solid the new lava flows over them.

In truth nothing can be more picturesque, could we divest ourselves of the feeling of misery and grief which pervades this hapless region.

The lava flows over the richest and most cuitivated part of the country, destroying vineyards, all sorts of fruit trees and some houses. Conceive the misery that has felien on many proprietors and colonists.

Since writing the above, we have accounts from Catania to the 24th September up to which date the eruption continued, but without having destroyed any village, though rich vineyards, woods, &c., have been devastated.
